WHO SHOULD ATTEND

InPaC 2021 is a platform for knowledge dissemination and academic engagement. The colloquium is for individuals who have completed or are currently engaged in postgraduate research.

Postgraduate students who are interested in language-related studies are welcomed to participate.

THE 5TH INTERNATIONAL POSTGRADUATE COLLOQUIUM InPaC 2021

InPaC is a one-day colloquium and it is open to postgraduate students from both local and international institutions of higher learning. The colloquium aims to provide ideal opportunities for postgraduate students to convene and share their experiences on current or completed work on language research.

The colloquium also intends to be a platform for postgraduate students to build research networks that will enable future collaboration, discussion and support between them. This will further enable language research development to be documented and compiled into a handbook compendium of local and international postgraduate research so that postgraduate students will be informed of the different areas of language research being undertaken, thus contributing to both local and international research on language. Besides, the colloquium provides an apt prospect for students to further document their research through publishing them in a peer-reviewed international journal (International Journal of Language, Literacy and Translation, IJoLLT).
